Combining Ethnology and Futures Research

The cases of assistance animals and mobile services in 2040's.

SARA PISTOTNIK (Ljubljana)

Erased of Slovenia

Changes in citizenship regimes and their impacts on everyday life.

Researcher Jussi Lehtonen from University of Turku, Finland, discuss how to combine ethnology and futures research methods. His doctoral thesis about mobile services in Finnish countryside and his post doctoral research about assistance animals and senior citizens are containing qualitative methods of futures research. With these two cases Lehtonen shows how to create ethnological scenarios for 2040's

Sara Pistotnik works on the phenomenon of statelessness in the region of ex Yugoslavia and tries to answer questions why it happened, which shapes it took, and how it was experienced by stateless people in their everyday lives. In this lecture she will present the case of the erased of Slovenia: Slovenian residents, whose permanent residency status was unconstitutionally erased after Slovene independence from Yugoslavia in 1991. She will explain how this severe institutional violence happened, what were its consequences, and how it was struggled against.
